108 Names of Sarasvatī

॥ श्रीः ॥

Introduction

This booklet contains the '108 Sacred Names' of Devī Sarasvatī (the presiding deity of knowledge), along with a prayer to Śāradā Devī.

The Vedas, the sacred texts that form the foundation of the Hindu tradition, have a highly refined understanding of 'God'. In the vision of the Vedas, 'God' is not a matter of belief but a conscious 'being' to be understood as the limitless, non-separate knowledge-and-material-cause of the entire universe. God is both immanent (in-and-through time and space) and transcendent (transcending time and space). In the scope of the Vedas, there is neither one god (monism) nor many gods (pantheism). There is only God; one Supreme Being.

The individual, through form-full worship, surrenders to the infinite intelligent whole to settle all relationship accounts. In the Vedas, this infinite-intelligent infallible God is called \bar{I} svara. The relationship between the devotee and \bar{I} svara has no imbalances, defects or potential conflicts. We intelligently pray for help from \bar{I} svara, who, possessed of the attribute of infallibility, requires no help. This is intelligent-seeking.

Īśvara has all virtuous qualities in full measure. 'yathā yathā upāste tadeva bhavati': 'as we worship, as we admire and praise, so we become'. We absorb those virtues that we openly admire and praise in prayer by chanting the sacred names of Īśvara. As we chant the names (nāma) we become absorbed in the named (nāmi). Through prayer, in the context of chanting Īśvara's names, one becomes absorbed in the named Īśvara until there is only Īśvara; understanding that everything in this creation is profoundly sacred. Through this form of prayer, one loses one's sense of alienation and isolation. When everything is understood to be sacred, one feels deeply connected to the whole, like being back in the womb. There is an expansion; a deep sense of interdependence; a freedom from isolation. Over time and with continued practice, this process of expansion will help resolve all psychological core issues in one's heart which may have remained unprocessed due to unresolved issues with mother-father, past lives, etc. This is why we can never bypass the heart; we can never bypass Īśvara.

Īśvara manifests as the limitless, non-separate knowledge and material-cause of the entire universe. Īśvara is conscious-being that sustains all 'creation'; creation, in this context, is to be understood more correctly as 'manifestation'. What is manifested is simply 'material' appearing as manifold names and forms with functions. Just as all 'ornaments' derive their existence from 'gold' (without 'gold' undergoing any change or modification), the jagat (the universe, including one's body-sense-mind complex) draws its existence from, and is sustained by the limitless and all-pervasive Īśvara. To be the 'truth of everything', 'God' has to be free of all limitations, modifications and attributes (including gender). Yet the beauty of this vision is that when all names and forms are non-separate from 'God', Īśvara may be objectified and therefore worshiped as any gender, name, form or function

Vedic cosmology places great value on the feminine principle; not only as the creative intelligence responsible for the manifestation of all names and forms (māyā), but also as all knowledge and abundance. These feminine principles govern many human desires, pursuits and goals. Human goals may be categorized as the following:

- 1) Dharma; earned grace (actions done based on universal values and Vedic guidance that produce grace).
- 2) Artha; security.
- 3) Kāma; pleasure.
- 4) Mokṣa; freedom from the notion of bondage/limitation and freedom from all forms of suffering.

Of these four goals, artha and kāma are generally the most popular due to the fact that they deal with easily observable, material outcomes. Because one has a feeling of lack based on the incorrect belief that one is limited and incomplete, one seeks external security and pleasures to fill that seeming lack.

In the scope of the Vedas, the ultimate 'goal' of every human being is mokşa. Since the sense of bondage, incomplete-ness and limitedness is notional, the knowledge that one is already full and complete will dispel this ignorance. Unlike an animal, which has no self-judgment, and has no need for such knowledge, human beings are self-aware and are therefore subject to self-judgment. Judgment, limitation, inadequacy and non-acceptance are universal human conditions which transcend all cultural differences. Selfjudgment arises from the ignorance of the fact that one already is limitless, full and complete; that one is, in essence, 'non-separate' from the limitless creator, Īśvara. One mistakenly takes oneself to be as limited as the body-sense-mind complex. This notion, born of self-ignorance, leads one to become entangled in a life of 'becoming', where one tries to compensate for this persistent notion of inadequacy by constantly trying to 'become' limitless.

There are numerous preparatory disciplines to be undertaken that will give the spiritual aspirant the needed qualifications to be able to study and be successful in gaining Self-knowledge (to recognize and own-up one's essential nature as absolute-fullness). Primarily, one is encouraged to cultivate devotion to the teacher and to the teaching. This devotion will help to give the person more maturity, helping her to turn away from an ego-driven worldview based on selfish and isolating concepts such as 'I-ness' and 'my-ness'. One requires a strong and healthy body that is free of disease and physical weakness. This is vitally important so that one is not waylaid by physical ailments while in the process of gaining knowledge. One needs to be a mature, integrated person who is relatively content, with a capacity to accept what 'is'. One requires discrimination (viveka) and dispassion (vairāgyam); the intellectual and emotional maturity to cease looking for the infinite in finite places and the dispassion to let go of all that is finite. One also needs the Grace of being in the proper place at the proper time. A bright intellect that has the power to grasp and retain what is studied is also required. All these scripturally guided disciplines, under the guidance of a traditional teacher, will help to integrate and harmonize the person physically, emotionally and cognitively. These Vedic disciplines will help one to make proper, informed choices; that is, make choices that support the goal of moksa. The results of these disciplines will help prepare one to discover the truth; that one is already infinite; pūrna; whole.

Regardless of whether one seeks to fulfill one's desires through material means (dharma, artha, kāma), or whether one seeks to resolve the desirer in the wake of knowledge of oneself (mokṣa), one finds that one is not in control (of almost anything). It is true that one is free to act, but one has no control over the results of one's actions.

Īśvara manifests as the laws of karma; the universal principles that govern the results of one's actions via cause-effect. The difference between the success and failure of any undertaking, given that one has applied timely and proper effort to its preparation, is this hidden variable that makes its appearance in the form of one's karma. Every day a portion of the karma allotted to the individual for that particular lifetime is made manifest and can bring with its manifestation difficulties and obstructions in varying degrees. Certain types of karmas can put roadblocks in one's path and can even hijack one's mindset, derailing the individual from the intended goal. Since the effects of these types of karmas are 'hidden', one cannot know when and in what form they will manifest. However, these karmas may be consciously neutralized or mitigated by right actions (punya karmas) in the form of prayer.

Prayer is the invocation of Īśvara as 'all-pervasive-infiniteintelligence-being'. Although there is an insect called a praying mantis, only human beings are actually capable of prayer. Prayer in action may be physical, verbal and/or mental. Each of these actions produces Grace (Dharma) because in prayer, the will is generally not enslaved by one's binding desires. In prayer, one understands and acknowledges one's own helplessness. In prayer, one may choose to surrender one's limitations to the 'altar of limit-less-ness'. Like all actions, prayer produces visible and invisible results. The visible results of prayer include a strengthening of the mind, helping to make it calm and free of conflict. The invisible results of prayer have the capacity to dissolve the unseen karmic obstacles that may be in one's path, freeing one to achieve one's goals with only limited or no obstructions. When one prays for knowledge of any kind, Īśvara is invoked in the form of Goddess Sarasvatī. The word Sarasvatī means 'the one who forms the infinite flowing river of knowledge'. Sarasvatī is the Vedic Goddess of knowledge. She presides over the knowledge of oneself as 'absolute-fullness' and the pursuit of all disciplines and arts (including speech and sound).

Vedic prayer is a form of surrender. The Sanskrit word for surrender is 'namaḥ'. It is an invocation that consciously acknowledges the forces in one's life one cannot control or change. Namaḥ also means 'surrendering one's feelings of helplessness to the altar of that which is all-powerful'. When surrender is successful, one loses the notional feeling of alienation with the realization that one is part of the whole (indeed, is the whole), and allows one to reconnect to one's sense of purpose; that purpose being the burning desire for freedom from suffering (saṁsāra).

Prayer, in the context of this booklet, is in the form of one hundred and eight names. These names reveal the 'nature' of \overline{I} 'svara. In truth, the number of repetitions and even the names themselves are irrelevant; all names and forms are the Goddess's alone.

If one repeats the name of a person or some inanimate object all day, one would be seen as suffering from some kind of obsessive mental disorder. But if one repeats the names of the Goddess all day, such a person is respected as a devotee. This is because, in the case of the Goddess, the name and the deity are one and the same. There is no distinction between the eulogized attributes and the conscious entity that represents them.

The chanting of one hundred and eight names has a purifying effect; partly because of the poetic and alliterative arrangements of the names and partly because, as one chants, one sees the meaning of the words as non-separate from oneself. In 'surrendering to the alter which encompasses everything'; in identifying with 'that which is all-powerful', this notional sense of alienation and limitation begins to dissolve.

There are numerous 'one hundred and eight names' compendiums available for chanting and worship; each dedicated to revealing the attributes of various deities. Of these, the one dedicated to Goddess Sarasvatī is very popular. She represents knowledge; that most salient of human pursuits. The types of names that reveal the nature of Goddess Sarasvatī are fourfold:

- Names which reveal the essential nature of Īśvara: om trikālajñāyai namaḥ; She who is unconditioned by time (#72).
- 2) Names which reveal Īśvara as the cause of the universe: om trayīmūrtyai namaḥ; She who is the cause, sustainer and destroyer of the universe (#71).
- 3) Names which indicate 'manifest form': om sarasvatyai namah; She, the flowing, all-pervasive one (#1).
- 4) Names which reveal the esoteric nature of the Goddess, describing Her attributes which are often symbolic in nature: om rakta-madhyāyai namaḥ; She who manifests as sacred blood (signifying the attribute of movement) (#103).

What is offered in this booklet is a simple translation, Sanskrit in IAST (International Alphabet of Sanskrit Transliteration) and the original Sanskrit of the names of Sarasvatī in devanāgarī script. This booklet is designed for the mind of the 'modern' reader who may be new to both the Vedic tradition and Sanskrit pronunciation. May the Goddess Sarasvatī abide in the devotee's heart in the form of honeyed speech, love, perseverance and a thirst for knowledge.

Śrī Svāmīņī Svatmavidyānanda Sarasvatī & Śrī Svāmī Vāgīśānanda Sarasvatī

Invocation

Oh, Goddess Sarasvatī, our salutations to you. You who fulfills all my desires, I am to begin my sacred studies. May my pursuit of Self-knowledge end in 'success'.

Om sarasvati namastubhyam varade kāma rūpiņi vidyārambham karisyāmi siddhirbhavatu me sadā

ॐ सरस्वति नमस्तुभ्यं वरदे काम रूपिणि । विद्यारम्भं करिष्यामि सिद्धिर्भवत मे सदा ॥

May the self-effulgent Goddess Sarasvatī, the conduit of `knowledge of the absolute'; the very incarnation of limitlessness (who praises those wise enough to have studied, absorbed and assimilated the four Vedas) ever reside in my heart and rest on my tongue.

> Om yā devī stūyate nityam vibhudairvedapāragaiķ sā me vasatu jihvāgre brahmarūpā sarasvatī

> > ॐ या देवी स्तूयते नित्यं विभुदैर्वेदपारगैः। सा मे वसतु जिह्वाग्रे ब्रह्मरूपा सरस्वती॥

We invoke the King among those who 'know' Brahman, who we recognize as the incarnation of limitless compassion. May the guru, the light of knowledge, the remover of darkness, stimulate and bless our intellects.

Om dayānandāya vidmahe brahmajñendrāya dhīmahi tanno guruh pracodayāt

नमामि यामिनीं नाथ-लेखालङ्कतकुन्तलाम् । भवानीं भवसन्ताप-निर्वापणसुधानदीम् ॥ ३॥

4) I surrender to the auspicious one who stretches in-and-through all of time and is yet timeless. I surrender again and again unto Sarasvatī, She who manifests as the limitless flow of relative and absolute knowledge spoken of in the Upaniṣads, the Vedas and the six limbs of the Vedas.

bhadrakālyai namo nityam sarasvatyai namo namaņ vedavedāngavedānta-vidyāstānebhya eva ca

भद्रकाल्ये नमो नित्यं सरस्वत्ये नमो नमः । वेदवेदाङ्गवेदान्त-विद्यास्तानेभ्य एव च ॥ ४ ॥

5) Salutations to the one known through speech, words and meanings; the very incarnation of Brahman – the absolute – who is the self-effulgent light of knowledge; who is the presiding Goddess over all forms of knowledge.

brahmasvarūpā paramā jyotirūpā sanātanī sarvavidyādhidevī yā tasyai vāņyai namo namaķ

ब्रह्मस्वरूपा परमा ज्योतिरूपा सनातनी । सर्वविद्याधिदेवी या तस्यै वाण्यै नमो नमः ॥ ५ ॥

6) Salutations to Sarasvatī, the all-pervasive one; the infiniteintelligent deity, manifest as the knower-known-knowledge of all beings; whose presence lends jagat its existence and radiance; without whom the entire universe would be lifeless.

yayā vinā jagatsarvam śaśvajjīvanmrtam bhavet jñānādhidevī yā tasyai sarasvatyai namo namah यया विना जगत्सर्वं शश्वजीवन्मृतं भवेत्। ज्ञानाधिदेवी या तस्यै सरस्वत्ये नमो नमः॥ ६॥ 7) I surrender to the one who manifests as speech; the presiding essence of articulation. Her absence would rob the cosmos of all sounds, words and sanity, rendering it mute.

yayā vinā jagatsarvam mūkamunmattavatsadā yā devī vāgadhisthātrī tasyai vāņyai namo namaņ

यया विना जगत्सर्वं मूकमुन्मत्तवत्सदा । या देवी वागधिष्ठात्री तस्येै वाण्येै नमो नमः ॥ ७ ॥

Thus, the praise-chant of Śrī Śāradā Devī is complete. Om iti śrī śāradādevī stotram sampūrņam ॐ इति श्री शारदादेवी स्तोत्रं संपूर्णम् ।

> Om śāntiḥ śāntiḥ śāntiḥ ॐ शान्तिः शान्तिः शान्तिः ॥

श्री स्वामी वागीशानन्द सरस्वती Śrī Svāmī Vāgīśānanda Sarasvatī

Śrī Svāmī Vāgīśānanda Sarasvatī is a senior disciple of Pūjya Śrī Svāmī Dayānanda Sarasvatī, and has been studying and teaching Vedānta since 1975.

Svāmī jī was in his teens when he became fascinated with mystical poetry and non-dualistic philosophies. In 1975, at the age of 19, he left his home in the United States and traveled to India to study in a traditional gurūkulam. After graduating from a three-year residential course in Vedānta and Sanskrit, he attended four subsequent three-year courses in the United States and in India.

Using the traditional methodology called sampradāya, Svāmī Vāgīšānanda 'unlocks' the scriptures of Vedānta, thereby removing the veil of ignorance; the cause of all human suffering. He is a traditional samnyāsi (a renunciant who is committed to a life of knowledge and has taken a vow of non-injury). A master of the South Indian Kṛṣṇa Yajur Veda style of chanting, Svāmī jī has traveled the world teaching Sanskrit, Vedic chanting and Vedānta.
